Download the 1920 London Full Movie MP4 Even though this story is fiction, it's very plausible that something like it could have happened. This video can put you in the shoes of one of these men. Imagine being drafted into an army, but when you arrive at warring country, they tell you this is not where your battalion is stationed. The government has made mistakes before; who knows what would happen if they missed sending soldiers to Crimea? They may never return home to their loved ones again. When this happens to someone who actually volunteered for military service, it's called desertion and can be punishable by death or imprisonment for life. This is why this film, "The 1920 London", is important even if it's fiction. The film's director, Marc Donato, wanted to show the world what war really means because he admits he did not know anything about what happened during World War I. He says "...I only knew the 1930s version of the war and didn't really get it until I was in my 20s." He decided to create something that could educate others along with entertaining them. But not everyone appreciates what he's done, as you can read in the film's press release. The writer of this film is Sacha Coté, who is a Canadian award winning playwright. He's written everything from the TV series "24" to the movie "Adoration". The 1920 London was released theatrically in Canada on Canada Day weekend 2011 and has received rave reviews ever since its release. The CBC described it as 'a stunning piece of independent film-making' while The Hollywood Reporter called it 'gripping, unique and gritty'. In fact, many audience members have been left in tears at the end of screenings as a result of its powerful and emotional story. The film has won 11 awards at various international film festivals including best picture, actor, script and editing. The 1920 London was nominated for 14 awards at the 2011 Toronto International Film Festival including a nod for Best Canadian Feature. It also won 10 audience awards at major film festivals across Canada including Vancouver International Film Festival, Atlantic Film Festival and Edmonton International Film Festival where it also won the award for best Canadian feature. The 1920 London was the opening film at the 2011 Vancouver International Film Festival. The 1920 London won 5 awards at the 2011 Atlantic Film Festival including Best Canadian Feature, Best Supporting Actress for Heather Robson, Best Supporting Actor for Peter Stebbings and Best Cinematography. It also won 1 award at the Bend Local Film Festival. Track list Track list Track list Track list Track list
